Practices for Verification of Student Identity

1. Identify whether students are enrolled in distance or correspondence courses.

2. Demonstrate that the institution verifies the identity of students enrolled in these courses, that any additional costs to the student because of this method are disclosed to students prior to enrollment, and that the method of verification makes reasonable efforts to protect student privacy.

Students enrolled in distance courses must provide Westminster network login information to access online courses provided in the Moodle course management system. There are no additional costs to students.
