Students will obtain knowledge in leadership and management theory; an understanding of a holistic approach of leading oneself in order to lead others; and the opportunities and challenges of a diverse workforce. Students will examine the successes and struggles of great leaders throughout history. Additionally, they will develop the skills and abilities to effectively communicate and collaborate with other leaders, peers, and direct reports; and the critical thinking skills to make effective and ethically sound decisions. As leadership is ever evolving, a special course will be offered yearly examining advanced topics in leadership.

The major in Leadership is also an ideal second major as the knowledge, skills and abilities acquired will complement all other academic disciplines. The major will enhance the academic achievement of students who will function in both formal and informal leadership roles currently and in the future.
